The four captured are dispatch says: "The four missing robbers went to a house at seven a. m. to-day, about seven miles north of here, bought some bread and butter and started using the 26th, he paying demurrage for the delay. The night before his departure Mr. Young telegraphed to Consul-Gen. be the noted Younger brothers. The dispatch says: "The four missing robbers some bread and butter and started west Hall at Havana that it was William on foot. News was sent in as fast as a horse could travel and forty or fifty men were after them as soon as they could get horses and arms. They drove them eight miles north of here. They then had them out on the prairie and opened fire on them. The robbers returned the fire but kept working toward the river and at last got there and hid in the bushes. By this time our men were all together and surrounded the bushes the robbers were in. The firing became general, our men advancing all the time.

At last the robbers saw there was no use and gave up. One was killed and the other three wounded. The one that is supposed to be Cole Younger is wounded badly in the hand and back. The other has a bad wound in the jaw and shoulder. It is thought that one, and perhaps two, will die of their wounds. One of them has an old wound in his arm, supposed to be one of the wounded at Northfield. Capt. Murphy was wounded in the side and George Bradford's arm scratched, their dead comrade."
